Chasworth Place Inc. Jeanette Chasworth

Jeanette Chasworth's clients have nicknamed her "the house whisperer" because of her approach to design. When starting a new design, she first listens to the needs and desires of both the client and the house. Instead of fitting her style to a project, she uses her intuition and design knowledge to create a unique environment that weaves together the stories of the client and the building.

Jeanette's education includes a degree in English Literature from the University of Redlands, along with a semester abroad at the University of Lancaster in England, In further travel throughout Europe, as well she witnessed the history of art, architecture, and craftsmanship first hand. a few years after graduating from university, that she discovered her passion could become her profession. Interior design incorporated her classical education with her artistic vision, and she immediately took steps to broaden her knowledge of Interior design.

She eared a degree from Los Angeles' Fashion Institute of Design and Merchandising (FIDM). Next were varying assignments, from showrooms at the Pacific Design Center, interior design firms, drapery manufacturers, and the assistant to the president and designer of a Bausman & Co., a premier furniture manufacturer. Her work at Bausman included the design of their Highpoint, North Carolina showroom, and the creation of vignettes for advertisements in Architectural Digest and Veranda magazine. During this time, she also began taking on freelance projects.

In 2002, Jeanette opened Chasworth Place, Inc. and her journey an interior designer took a new and exciting turn. Colleagues and clients sum up their experiences with Chasworth Place Inc. IT gave them sanctuary, visual expressions of their personality in emotional reactions that are not clinicial...always a sense of peace and comfort, and new colors and textures to create harmony and energy with their home.

In addition to managing Chasworth Place Inc., Jeanette has taken her love one step further, by being and interior design instructor. She has inspired students at Citrus College in Glendora, the University of California at Riverside, and Mt. San Antonio College in Walnut.

Jeanette's portfolio illustrates great diversity in design, as her philosophy is unbounded by a particular style, and her inspiration draws from the desires that houses may 'whisper in her ear'. Her premiere projects include an 1875 arts-and-crafts residence in Glendora, CA. Here she showcased her subtle and dynamic use of color, while preserving the history and integrity of one of the areas historical structures. Among her current work is a 1960's-era condominium. her use of modern furnishings and fabrics showcase the client's impressive collection of unique antiques, as well as a view of Pasadena's Arroyo Seco.
